The bill passed a state Senate committee 8-0, the full Senate 23-10 and a House committee 8-5. Then it failed 24-46

funding. But they could also request a waiver and work with the state School Finance Accountability Board to come into compliance. The bill does not include any additional money for schools beyond the regular, annual increases in state funding approved by lawmakers and the governor.

The amendment allows wiggle room for school districts to pay for other positions or services, lobbyists told lawmakers — such as career and technical education programs, paraprofessional salaries or bus driver salaries. It also lessens the impact on the few school districts that receive minimal state funding (because their local property taxes and federal funding cover most or all of their costs) or school districts experiencing declining enrollment and therefore seeing decreases in state funding.

Hours later, the House of Representatives "houghoused" a bill — which is a term for striking the entire language of a bill and replacing it with a different bill — and replaced it with the language of the teacher pay bill from before it was amended Thursday morning. The houghoused bill passed the House 60-7 (gaining two more votes since it originally passed the chamber last week).

Rep. Tony Venhuizen, R-Sioux Falls, told his colleagues that the House-approved version of the bill prioritizes teacher pay and ensures that increased state funding "gets from us, through to the school, into the pocket of teachers," which is "the most important thing we're doing."

"The House is just really reiterating our position that if we give an increase to the schools, they need to give a commensurate increase to teachers," Venhuizen told South Dakota Searchlight. "We're willing to talk to our friends in the Senate about that, but amendments that water that down mean that less money will go into teachers' of the bill remained nimbler than a report he read on the events of Jan. 6, 2021, about "hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of fellow American patriots who were imprisoned because they were in the wrong place at the wrong time."

"Some were incarcerated without any evidence, just dug up, pulled out of thin air by the prosecutors in D.C.," Jensen said, before being cut off by Speaker Hugh Bartels, who ordered Jensen to address his remarks to the bill.

morning that he didn't think the House-approved legislation would make it through the Senate without an amendment.

"Fifty percent acknowledges you can't throw all your money into one basket here, so I think this is a good amendment to keep the discussion going," Schoenfish said.

Proponents said there are more discussions needed and work to be done before the bill can head to the governor's desk.

Watertown Republican Rep. Hugh Bartels, who has been in discussions to amend and find compromise on the bill since it was first proposed, told lawmakers that while the House likely wouldn't agree with the amendment, it's something they can continue to work on in the legislative process.

Rep. Roger DeGroot, R-Brookings, told committee members that South Dakota is underfunding public education "a great deal." He said the state is underfunding education by roughly $56 million, based on an "unsubstantiated" analysis of school districts passing opt outs (in which taxpayers elect to pay more in property taxes than state limits otherwise allow) or dipping into their capital outlay fund (typically reserved for buildings and construction) to pay for general fund expenses.

Christine Stephenson, a Rapid City Area Schools board member who spoke for herself and not the board, was the sole opponent to speak against the bill. She told lawmakers that inadequate funding must be addressed in the coming years — especially if the bill is signed into law.

Stephenson cited statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau showing that South Dakota public schools spend the least as a school district, we're very humbled with the results of the renewal and that people understood why we needed to do it. I really think they trusted us and what we did with the opt-out over the past four years, and we will continue to move forward with that trust and confidence that we have with the community."

Opt-Out

As a side note, the tax levy on the new opt-out is less than what it was in 2021 when the previous opt-out went into effect.

A number of services and programs were made possible because of the opt-out, and Kindle was happy to share them during his discussion with the Press & Dakotan.

"There is a list of things that we've been able to do with the opt-out," he said. "We've kept our promise with tuition-free preschool for every child that's in the Yankton School District. We've continued a lot of different programming needs that we felt were important four years ago that we wanted to continue. We've increased the number of school counselors, school nurses, and we have expanded our in-town bus locations. "The other thing that has been really important to us is knowing that, with the Trailhead Learning Center being built (with capital outlay money, not opt-out funds), we are going to have some staffing needs with that. We built it for more capacity than what we currently have. And if we fill that up, which I believe we will, we will need to hire some additional staff."

The Trailhead Learning Center is the district's new early childhood development center that will house all pre-school, junior kindergarten and kindergarten students starting in the 2025-26 school year.

amount of money per student compared to surrounding states. North Dakota, for example, spends 37% more on education per student than the Mount Rushmore state.

According to the National Education Association, South Dakota ranks 49th in average teacher pay (out of 51, due to the inclusion of Washington, D.C.).

"That's despite the passage of a half-percentage-point increase in the state sales tax rate in 2016 as part of legislation to raise teacher salaries. The legislation sent an infusion of money to schools that pushed South Dakota up a few places in national teacher pay rankings, but the state has slipped in the rankings since then. Last year, legislators and Gov. Noem reduced the state sales tax rate from 4.5% to 4.2%.

Sen. Davis said discussions about adequate education funding are for future sessions. This bill focuses on teacher pay accountability and addressing expiring provisions from the 2016 law that were intended to ensure such accountability.

"I know we've heard a lot of questions on sustainability of a bill like this and I think, in the future, this type of bill will lead to future discussions of funding, funding per student, and how we fund education," Davis said.

The House and Senate have next week to work out their differences and pass a bill to Gov. Kristi Noem, who has spoken repeatedly about her desire for action on teacher pay.

"We're very comfortable with the plan we have," Venhuizen said. "We'll keep talking to the senators, but we think we have the best plan and we're hoping we can move it forward."
